Italian Jealousy and Revenge.

Rome, Jan. 31. A tragical specimen of Italian jealousy took place in the beginning of this week at the Pope's favorite summer residence, the once famous but now deserted sea-coast town of Porto d'Anzio. The women of that and the neighboring town of Nettuno are celebrated for their beauty, but the charms of a young girl, the daughter of a fisherman of Porto d'Anzio, have for some time past entitled her to a pre-eminent rank even in that land of beauties. A young man belonging to a noble family of Orvieto, while casually sojourning in Porto d'Anzio, became enamored of the fisherman's daughter to such a degree as to overlook all differences of rank, and to wish for a union with the object of his passion; but his parents put a stop to his matrimonial intentions by suddenly summoning him back to Orvieto, and keeping him there in expectation of some more suitable project. The young girl, thus unwillingly abandoned by townsmen, quite a youth, and can of the Municipal Secretary, who professed the most ardent attotally unprepared to meet the expenses of the age collected, viz.: matrimonial state. While these unsatisfactory propositions were pending, the Orvietan lover sent a letter, stating that by the decease of his parent he had become master of his own actions, and he should lose no time in returning to Porto d'Anzio, to fulfill his promise of marrying the fisherman's daughter. This piece of intelligence was favorably received by the old man and the young girl, and their expectations were realized toward the end of last week by seeing the amorous Count arrive from Rome, laden with presents for his intended bride. The necessary preliminaries having pages, 8 cents. been summarily arranged, the impatient lovers were united in the holy bonds of matrimony on Sunday morning last, the bride being fashionably attired in the wedding dress and bonnet brought by her husband for the occasion. It would be superfluous to hint at the rage and disappointment of the discarded suitor. He passed his morning in smoking and playing at billiards, hardly replying to the sarcastic remarks of his friends, who expatiated on the beauty of the bride, and the becomingness of her new dress. In the afternoon, however, he was roused by seeing the bridegroom and bride, with her father and little brother, set out for Nettuno, a neighboring town about two miles distant, in a carretino or chaise. He immediately barrelled fowling piece, telling his mother that he cured at this office. JOSEPH JACKSON, was going to shoot a hare, whose heart and liver he intended to have for supper that very evening. Thus armed, he proceeded towards Nettuno, and waited for his victims at a turn of the road between the batteria and the Villa Doria. The bridal middle of the road. The bride was seized with a be' w: panic, and exclaimed, "Oh, Dio! There is Paoltold her there was nothing to be alarmed at, as a days. proof of which he stopped his horse on reaching his rival, and said to him, "Good evening, Paolo; where are you going?" to which the other replied, "Do you not see ? I am going to shoot a hare," presenting at the same time his piece at the bride. She shrieked out, "Spare our lives, Paolo!" Her sternly replied. "It is too late!" and, firing immediately, shot the bride through the heart with a loaded. Seeing that his rival was not killed, Paolo fired his other barrel without effect, and was day night or Thursday morning. proceeding coolly to reload, when the Count urged his horse into a gallop, and made at once for Porto d'Anzio. The murderer, a youth not 18 years old, then struck into the forest, and made the best of his way to the outlaws' asylum, at Campo Morto, a vast estate belonging to the chapter of St. Peter, and situated in such a pestiferous region of the Campagna that it has always been considered as a sanctuary for murderers and robbers, who have remained time out of mind unmolested within its precincts, and employed as laborers for want of more honest workmen. Paoluccio, having the addition-Campo Morto, doubtless thought himself quite and third THURSDAY of each month. safe in this retreat; but the Government has latenot sufficiently active in thinning their ranks, so on hereafter. that the police authorities are not so scrupulous in observing the traditional immunities of the place. The consent of the Dean and Chapter of St. Peter's having been previously obtained, a detachment of sbirri set out from Rome yesterday morning to make an inroad into the crime-haunted murderer who so ruthlessly carried to their extremes the violent passions of amore and vendetta.

F Morton, the Nebraska editor, wishes somebody would hang a few of the postmasters in Iowa, on account of the delay of the mails. He says: "The last bundle of the New York Tribunes that was received at Nebraska City, had a mouse's nest in it, and five young ones alive, besides several dead ones, supposed to have been poisoned by eating one of Greely's leaders."-Nan. Inquirer.

transparent color and a fine bead. Lacour's Oils this Department. exert three distinct properties in converting common whisky to brandy, gin, &c. The first property combines with and subsides in the form of floculent particles the whole of the grain oil (Amylic Alcohol) The whisky is thus deprived of that peculiar irritating and burning taste, and becomes a neutral spirit; the second property consists in an oily mucillaginous taste imparted to the liquor, which renders it mellow, and imparts an appearance of great age; the third property is exhibited in the rich vinous, nutty odor that is imparted to the liquor, which renders distinction from the genuine brands impossible.

These oils are put up in quart flasks; each flask contains sufficient oil for making three hundred gallons of liquor. Full and comprehensive directions accompany the bettles. Price, $2 per bottle.

For sale at the corner of St. Charles and Poydras streets, New Orleans.
